

Nana Kwame Adjei-Brenyah,
the New York Times-bestselling author of
"Friday Black"

March 4, 2021, at 12 p.m.

RSVP to attend at howardcc.edu/bauderlecture

HCC Diversity Week event: Diversity Index # 8670

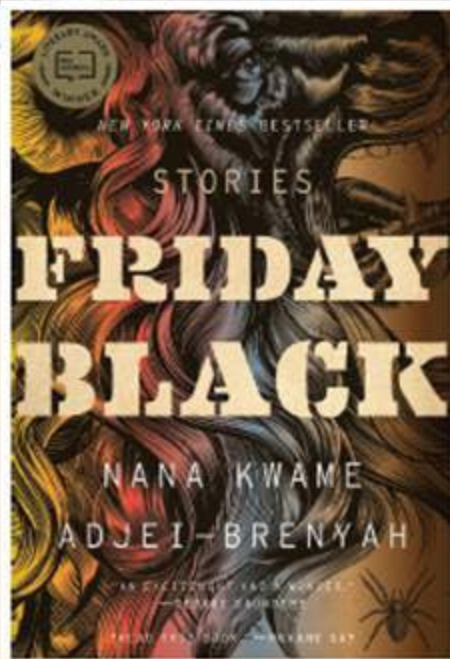

Nana Kwame Adjei-Brenyah's debut work, "Friday Black," is a collection of twelve short stories that explore the injustices experienced by Black men and women in the U.S. Adjei-Brenyah, a professor at Syracuse University, uses fiction, humor, and shock to tackle urgent instances of racism and cultural unrest in America.

Following his keynote, Adjei-Brenyah will be joined by Tope Folarin, the author of "A Particular Kind of Black Man," for an in-depth conversation.

This event is open to all.

If reasonable accommodations are needed, please email the Office of Student Life (studentlife@howardcc.edu) at least 72 hours prior to the event.

The Bauder Lecture by Howard Community College is made possible by a generous grant from Dr. Lillian Bauder, a community leader and Columbia resident. "Friday Black" was selected by the Howard County Book Connection committee, which is a partnership of Howard Community College and the Howard County Poetry and Literature Society.

The Howard County Library System is a co-promoter of this event.